REASON FOR TODAY'S CALL:
 downstairs: toilet leaking water at base - probably the O ring upstairs: toilet backing up - gurgling There might be some blockage or some balance issues.

DESCRIPTION OF WORK PERFORMED:
 ---Powder Room: Moisture was only noticed at the front of the base of the bowl, and only periodically. The toilet was secure to the wood floor and I could see no signs of the wood floor swelling due to moisture. I tested by flushing the toilet multiple times and could not recreate any leaking. I believe what is happening is that on occasion some urine is making its way down the front of the bowl and collecting on the floor(I could see signs of this on the bowl itself). ---Master Bathroom: The toilet is flushing normally. There was however some negative pressure being created in the drainage on some flushes that would cause the tub drain to gurgle. This could be an issue with the buildings vent stack.
